950 Mason St.

San Francisco

Experience, Acrylic and Oil on Canvas, 61 x 51 inches

SAN FRANCISCO, CA — Gefen Gallery is pleased to present Impermanence, a solo exhibition by Claudia Limacher that reflects on the transient nature of perception, memory, and emotion, where moments continuously shift, dissolve, and re-form as traces of feeling and recollection. Across the exhibition, layered greens, blues, pastel tones, and jeweled metallic accents evoke fleeting impressions of water, forests, sky, and shifting light. Limacher's abstract mixed-media works unfold as atmospheric fields where image and sensation remain in constant flux. Through these compositions, Impermanence positions change as both subject and process. Forms emerge and fade through layered gestures of pigment, oil, ink, spray paint, and acrylic, suggesting a continuous state of becoming.

Claudia Limacher (b. 1967, Germany) is a contemporary artist whose practice is grounded in synesthesia, where sensory experiences such as sound, memory, and emotion are translated into color, forming a deeply intuitive visual language. Working from this perceptual framework, she develops layered compositions in pigment, oil, ink, spray paint, and acrylic, building surfaces that oscillate between light and density, cohesion and rupture. Her work draws on natural forces and internal states alike, using fluid, rhythmic mark-making to explore transformation, emotional resonance, and the subtle ways perception is constructed and altered.

Gefen Gallery embarked on a transformative journey with its inaugural exhibitions, presenting international emerging artists alongside established figures in contemporary art. Since its founding in 2018, the gallery has grown through the support of collectors, artists, and its dedicated team, expanding to three distinct locations while curating a diverse program across painting, drawing, sculpture, installation, and more.

Gefen Gallery is committed to fostering dialogue between emerging and established practices across different creative epochs, with a roster of over twenty international emerging artists alongside renowned practitioners. The gallery regularly participates in major art fairs including EXPO Chicago while continuing to present thoughtfully curated exhibitions across its locations. Through close collaboration with collectors, Gefen Gallery supports the development of meaningful collections and realizes special projects and large-scale, site-specific works that extend contemporary art into both public and private spaces.
